Whether you are growing plants and flowers, or fruit and vegetables, one thing is for sure, there is always something new to learn and try. Almost every year I pick up some new major tip or technique that brings greater success to my gardening. For example, a few years ago I learnt about 'no dig' gardening - you don't dig the soil. Instead you put large quantities of compost on the soil in the Fall. This protects the soil during the winter and attracts huge amounts of worms who dig and distribute the compost throughout the soil for you. I highly recommend Googling no dig gardening.

Anyway below is a post detailing 20 clever gardening tips that you may not be aware of. Check it out below (use the left/right arrows at the top of the page to navigate the gardening tips!).
