Field Treatment of Diabetic Shock

I often get asked about what diabetics should do in survival or SHTF situations... If you are prepping and getting caught up with all the if, buts and hows, imagine for a moment, how much more difficult it would be if you or a family member had a illness or condition which requires regular treatment.

I don't have all the answers, but below is a post detailing the symptoms of diabetic shock, and how to treat it in the field. It is especially important to know the symptoms as one of the main one is confusion, so the affected person might not be able to say - hey I am diabetic and going into shock.

Field Treatment of Diabetic Shock

(Photo from: Outdoor Self Reliance)