How To Build a Worm Tower

Categories: Growing your Own, Homesteading, Self-Sufficiency

A Worm Tower is basically a length of pipe buried halfway in the ground with holes drilled in the buried part for worms to get in and out. Food scraps are added directly to the tower instead of into your composting bin, and are eaten by worms already living in the target part of your yard.

This is simple to make and really good for your garden. Your garden will love you forever if you make a few of these, see how to make make these and read a little more information on why they are so good below.

How To Build a Worm Tower

(Picture Credit: midwestpermaculture.com)