How To Make A Candle From An Orange

Categories : General Prepping, Homesteading

So what do you do if the lights go off and you don't have any candles? Well you can actually make some DIY candles pretty easily.

See my previous posts: How to Make an Everlasting Candle from Crisco and How To Make An Emergency Candle From Butter

Today I am going to add orange candles to the list of DIY candles. The advantage an orange candle has over others, is that it has a built in wick, so no additional wick is required. This literally means that if you have an orange and some cooking oil, such as plain vegetable oil or olive oil, you have potentially got two candles (because you cut the orange in half and use both halves as candles).

Another added benefit is that candles made from oranges, smell amazing!

It is pretty straight forward, but if you want more details, check out the tutorial below from Instructables.

How To Make A Candle From An Orange
(Photo from: DuelPhase via Instructables)