How To Make Rhubarb Wine

Categories : Homesteading, Recipes

It's rhubarb season! Rhubarb is one of my favourite vegetables (it is a vegetable, Google it!), but if like many folks, several years after planting you now have a huge amount of rhubarb, it might be time to put it to a different use and make some rhubarb wine... After-all there is only so much rhubarb pie and pickle you can eat.

Rhubarb wine taste delicious, so nice in fact I am surprised it is not commercially available, it's a bit like mead (see how to make mead) in that respect, a forgotten relic. If you have a load of rhubarb laying around, I highly recommend having a go at making some rhubarb wine. Make it, put it away for a few months and then break it out in the summer for a delicious summer time drink.

Check out the great tutorial below from Country Living In a Cariboo Valley
How To Make Rhubarb Wine

(Photo from: Country Living In a Cariboo Valley)