This reminds me of a holiday a few years back. We were on a hiking trip in the Austrian Alps (no one drinks schnapps like the Austrians). It's a long story involving a lovely Dutch couple, some Austrian locals, a guy with a harp (honestly!) and so, so much schnapps. I didn't realize there were so many different types of schnapps to try. It's fair to say that the coach ride winding down through the alps, to the airport the morning after was not an enjoyable experience.

Anyway I have completely digressed. If you want to find out how to make your own schnapps or vodka from plain old potatoes, check out the link below. There are full instructions and several recipes to try. Additionally - take a look around the website as there is loads of home brewing and distilling information, recipes and advice.

How To Make Vodka & Schnapps From Potatoes

(Image from: Wikipedia)