How to Survive a Summer Power Outage

Categories: Uncategorized

Blackouts can last anywhere from a few hours to a few days and preparing for the loss of electricity is just like being prepared for any other emergency, you will need food, water, a way to heat food, lights, and batteries. However, during the summer months, there are extra precautions you should take. It is important to stay as cool as possible and hydrated.

Being prepared for any emergency is the key. A lot of us only really prepare for a winter power outage, preparing for a summer outage is just as important if not more important.
