Make A Paracord Belt With Carabiner Buckle

Categories : General Prepping, Wilderness Survival

Everyone knows how useful paracord can be in a survival situation, but just in case, check out my earlier post: 101 Uses For Paracord (Seriously, there's 101 uses listed here)

As a result paracord bracelets are particularly popular with preppers and those who practise survival skills. Paracord key-fobs and watch straps (see: Make A DIY Paracord Watch Strap) are also popular.

Whilst all of these a very useful, the amount of paracord you can carry is very limited. With this in mind, how about making a paracord belt! It's a win, win, as a paracord belt can look really smart if you purchase a nice belt buckle (this belt is a bit more tactical and functional with a carabiner buckle) but the really great thing about a paracord belt is that it can hold over 100 feet of paracord! That's right - 100 feet of paracord in one belt, that's always with you.

If you are interested in making a paracord belt, head over to the Instructables website and check out mobiobi's tutorial. Also, check out these great belt buckles and make a top notch belt!

Make A Paracord Belt With Carabiner Buckle

(Photo from: mobiobi via Instructables)