Preparing For A Viral Pandemic

I think it is widely believed by scientists that it is only a matter of time before we have a worldwide influenza pandemic. It has happened several times before in individual countries and it is only a matter of time before a strand of influenza evolves into a more serious and deadly strand which is resistant to existing anti-virals. The problem this time is that with all the daily flights around the world, an isolated outbreak in one region can be spread worldwide in days.

A viral pandemic is one of the top three scenarios preppers are concerned about and prepare for... The question is - are they preparing effectively to enable them to survive and get through a viral pandemic?

If a future viral pandemic is a scenario you are concerned about, you really need to check out the article bellow from UsCrow, which includes vital information on how you and your family can prep to survive a viral pandemic.

Prepare For A Viral Pandemic