The problem with growing fruit trees from seeds is that it may take very long to bear fruits - sometimes more than ten years - and there is no guarantee that the fruits will taste same as the one from which you got the seeds.

Air-layering is one method of propagating a fruit tree from an existing one, which will bear fruits sooner, and the fruits will taste same as the mother-plant.

Picture Credit: antoniraj