The Benefits of a Root Cellar

Categories: Food & Water, General Prepping, Homesteading, Self-Sufficiency

A well-insulated root cellar can keep the food inside 40 degrees cooler than the summertime temperatures outside. This coolness also has benefits during the winter, as maintaining food at a temperature just slightly above freezing has the effect of slowing deterioration and rot.

Root cellars actually offer real possibility of reducing expenses and providing for significant food storage in times of potential trouble also if well hidden a great hiding place for your supplies.

Photo Credit: lieber_matthew

The Benefits of a Root Cellar