This is a great article I found that explains the benefits of raising chickens, raising a handful of your own backyard chickens, giving you complete control over egg quality and ultimately you choose what they eat and how "organic" they and the eggs will be.

Home-raised chickens may not be an option for everybody, but they are more of an option than you may think. Even if you live in the city, once you realize the myriad benefits a small flock of three or more hens can provide, you'll start thinking of your non-chicken-keeping neighbors as the strange ones.
