What To Plant Now For Fall (Autumn) Crops

Categories: Growing your Own, Homesteading

So if you are lucky right now, you are tucking into loads of homegrown salad vegetables, potatoes, beans and squashes. The thing is - many people stop now that the main summer crop is here, but this is a mistake as there are still a whole load of vegetables that can be planted now that will still have time to crop in the fall/autumn.

If you have some empty patches in your garden where you have dug up some vegetables already, head over to 'The Gardening Cook' on the link below and find out what you can plant there, and enjoy eating October time. We always continue planting beetroot, green onions and lettuce right through to the beginning of September, but I guess it depends on your location and climate.

What To Plant Now For Fall (Autumn) Crops

(Image from: The Gardening Cook)